HO CHI MINH CITY, VIETNAM

Vietnamese People's Legendary Origins

It is said that in ancient times, King Kinh Duong of the Land of Su married the daughter of the Dragon King of the Kingdom of the Waters, Princess Long Nu. This union produced a handsome, strong and courageous son: Prince Lac Long Quan. When he ascended to the throne, he had many adventures and fought against the demons that inhabited the land at the time. When he judged that the country was now at peace, he retired to his mother's palace in the Kingdom of the Waters. Some time later, taking advantage of Lac Long Quan's absence, the sovereign of the North invaded the Land of Su. He was an authoritarian and wicked man, but his daughter was incomparably beautiful.

Called to help by his people, Lac Long Quan marched on the evil sovereign's fortress. On the way, he met his daughter, Princess Au Co, who was the most beautiful and charming of all the princesses. Love at first sight was instantaneous and mutual, and Princess Au Co begged King Lac Long Quan to take her away from her father's tyranny. The king took her to a fortress built in the mountains when he used to fight demons. Furious at seeing his daughter kidnapped, the King of the Northern Kingdom sent his troops after her, but Lac Long Quan crushed them and the evil King of the Northern Kingdom, terrified, quickly returned home.

The lovers were able to live out their happiness together, and one fine day, Princess Au Co gave birth to a bag of skin containing one hundred fetuses, which in six days became one hundred handsome boys who quickly grew into strong, intelligent men.

But one fine day, Lac Long Quan needed to return to the Land of the Waters. Together with Au Co, they decided to go their separate ways, taking their children with them. Fifty of them left for the Land of the Waters, in the plains, and became the ancestors of the Kinhs or Viets. The other fifty stayed with their mothers in the mountains and are the ancestors of all the peoples living in these parts and on the high plateaux.

HAND WASHING & HAND SANITIZING

Keeping hands clean through improved hand hygiene is one of the most important steps we can take to avoid getting sick and spreading germs to others. Many diseases and conditions are spread by not washing hands with soap and clean, running water. Alcohol-based hand sanitizers can quickly reduce the number of germs on hands. Please use the hand sanitizers situated at the entrance door of the dining outlets and various locations around the ship.
